

Dr. Sheri Marie Shuck-Hall is from Stone Island, Florida, where she gained an appreciation for the Southeast's rich indigenous heritage. She received her B.A. in history from Berry College and her master's and doctorate degrees in history from Auburn University. Her areas of specialty are American Indian studies, colonial American history, and public history/museum studies.

Her most recent publication is a history of the Alabama and Coushatta Indians, a southeastern tribe who migrated from present-day Alabama to East Texas over three centuries (1050-1865).

The book, entitled Journey to the West: The Alabama and Coushatta Indians (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2008), is available at <http://www.oupress.com/bookdetail.isbn=978-0-8061-3940-1>.

Shuck-Hall's current project is co-editing with Robbie Ethridge (at the University of Mississippi) a volume of essays connecting the decline and fall of the pre-contact Native Mississippian world to the beginnings of European contact. The book, entitled Mapping the Mississippian Shatter Zone: The European Invasion and Regional Instability in the American South, is in press and scheduled to be released by the University of Nebraska Press in Fall 2009.
